OEE2021 – Net-zero powered by the ocean

Building back better means investing now to secure a zero-carbon future. This year’s conference programme looks at how ocean energy technologies will help us reach this goal, and what is needed to get there. Revenue support and affordable finance are at the very top of the list, and the OEE2021 programme will highlight how the current offshore strategy can support the sector in securing these.

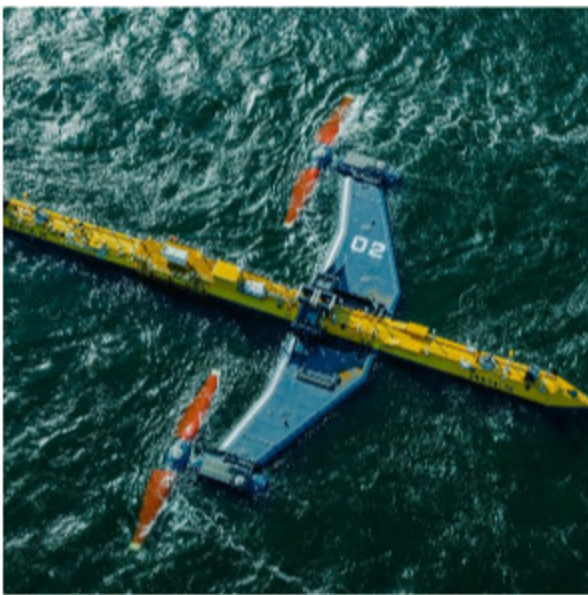

The ocean energy sector’s mission is clear: deploy, deploy, deploy! The conference will feature the latest deployments and the projects that are in the pipeline. It will show how, as an indigenous resource, ocean energy is creating a resilient industry, quality jobs and an extensive supply chain across Europe and beyond.

All time are shown in CET time zone.

TARGET 2025: DELIVERING ON THE OFFSHORE STRATEGY

The European Offshore Strategy has a clear short-term objective for ocean energy: 100MW by 2025. The industry has made clear that this target is achievable ... if the right framework is in place. This session assembles political, governmental and industry leaders to articulate how that framework should look.

BUILDING NATIONAL SUPPORT: A PATHWAY TO MULTI-DEVICE FARMS

A supportive policy environment at national level is necessary for the deployment of ocean energy multi-device farms. The Interreg NWE Ocean DEMO project is working actively with national governments in North-Western Europe to create policies that will enable the immense potential of ocean energy.

This side event will bring together national policy experts from France, Ireland, the Netherlands, and the United Kingdom to discuss the current ocean energy policy landscape in their respective countries and how it can be improved in the future.
